INTRODUCING KIDS (AND GRANDKIDS!) TO INVESTING

It's a good idea to introduce the concept of investing early on. It's a great way to reinforce the ideas of goal setting, saving, and budgeting. It can help put them on a long-term path to financial independence.

Start by explaining that investing is a means of using your money to try to create more money. This usually starts to make more sense for kids when they start to work and they can finally realize how hard they have to work to pay for something, especially after Uncle Sam takes his fair share.

You can start with a family meeting. Explain that instead of earning a few dollars every year in interest, they might be able to earn more.

Have them come up with a list of things they like. It can range from where they like to eat, to where they like to shop, to their favorite electronics. Have them do some research online, or at the library.

Get together several times per year to check on the stocks. It allows the kids to keep an interest as new stocks come to mind.

For buying and trading, you can easily open up an account at Fidelity, Schwab, TD Ameritrade or E-trade - they're easy platforms to use.

To give your kids a solid foundation, be sure to discuss these points:

1. Time horizon matters – the market has natural fluctuations.
2. Strategy is important – Do your research, and use this information to determine asset allocation and a plan.

3. The real power of investing lies in compound growth, which can have a snowball effect as your earnings grow over time.
4. Diversification—It's risky to put all your eggs in one basket. You can minimize risk by diversifying, which can involve investing in many industries, not just one sector.
5. Monitor results—it's important to keep your eye on results and periodically compare returns with appropriate benchmarks.
6. Rebalance—Asset classes and industry sectors perform differently over time, so it's important to check your allocations once a year.

If you want to learn more about investing for yourself or your children, we offer a no-obligation consultation to members of the PSE Credit Union. You can schedule yours today by calling us at 216.521.1711, emailing us at Quarterback@Lineweaver.net, or visiting us at Lineweaver.net.
